Singles Highlights

#1: Tones And I ‘Dance Monkey’ – Tones And I breaks the record for most weeks spent at #1 on the ARIA Singles Chart. ‘Dance Monkey’, which is only her second single, breaks Ed Sheeran’s record of 15 weeks with Shape Of You, which has stood since 2017, and is the first Australian single to hold this record since the ARIA Charts began in 1983.

Dan Rosen, CEO of ARIA, said: “This is a truly historic achievement. I am so incredibly thrilled that an Australian artist now holds the record for the longest running Number One song in ARIA Chart history. From busking a year ago to shattering chart records, this is just the start for Tones And I.”

This is the latest chart record for the singer-songwriter, who has broken many records to get here. Over the last 16 weeks she beat out most weeks spent at #1 on the ARIA Singles by any female artist, and any Australian artist and finally this week, any artist. She has also topped the charts in 18 countries, including a record-breaking run by an Australian artist in the UK. She has topped the global charts for Spotify, Shazam, Apple Music, YouTube Music and other music services.

Tones And I now heads into literally uncharted territory, whilst in the middle of a sold-out world tour. She is returning to Australia to perform at the ARIA Awards on 27 November, where she leads the nominations tally with eight.

‘Never Seen The Rain’, her follow up to ‘Dance Monkey’, holds this week at #10.

#2: Maroon 5 ‘Memories’ – In its eighth week on the Singles Chart, ‘Memories’ rises two spots to a new peak. The band’s only previous single to better this position was ‘She Will Be Loved’ (#1 Sep. ‘04), with four other of their tracks

peaking at #2: 'Girls Like You' (Jul. '18), 'One More Night' (Aug. '12), 'Payphone' (Jun. '12) and 'Moves Like Jagger' (Aug. '11).

#5. Arizona Zervas 'Roxanne' – Arizona Zervas is the latest singer to parlay viral popularity into chart success, arriving in the Top 50 for the first time. Writing and producing all his own music, the independent artist and US native has steadily built a loyal following, with 'Roxanne' being used in over 320,000 TikTok videos to date.

#6: Dua Lipa 'Don't Start Now' – Fresh from an acclaimed performance at the MTV EMAs, English singer Dua Lipa rises two spots to equal the success of her first Singles Chart entry, 'Be The One' (#6 May '16). She has also scored Top Ten hits with 'New Rules' (#2 Sep. '17) and 'IDGAF' (#3 Apr. '18).

Dua Lipa is set to perform at the 2019 ARIA Awards.

#20: Meduza 'Lose Control' – This week's biggest mover, Meduza's 'Lose Control' rises eight places to its highest position to date. This is the Italian production trio's second entry into the Singles Chart, with previous single 'Piece Of Your Heart' peaking at #7 in July of this year.

#7: George Michael & WHAM! 'Last Christmas - The Original Motion Picture Soundtrack' – The late George Michael returns to the Top 50 with a collection of songs spanning his career as a solo artist and as half of pop duo WHAM!, plus previously unreleased solo track 'This Is How (We Want You To Get High)'. The nine-track album is billed as a sequel to the band’s self-titled debut, which peaked at #9 in June 2009, as both albums were recorded in times of trauma for singer-songwriter Danny O’Donoghue; both of his parents died on Valentine’s Day ten years apart.
